SASQUATCH COUNTRY ADVENTURES OPENS FIRST SEASON

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS, BRITISH COLUMBIA – Sasquatch Country Adventures (SCA) is offering tourists, adventure seekers and curious visitors from across the globe a chance to explore one of the world’s most talked-about mysteries. Beginning May 29th, SCA will embark on its first season, providing personalized, educational and entertaining mini-adventures of an area that is a global hot spot for Sasquatch (Bigfoot) sightings.

This year, Sasquatch Country Adventures (www.sasquatchcountryadventures.com) will be unveiling its newest six-passenger, open-air Polaris Ranger UTV. This highly customized utility vehicle takes visitors into the heart of Sasquatch country, providing an opportunity to visit locations where the Sasquatch has been reported being seen by countless witnesses.

“Our goal at Sasquatch Country Adventures is to give our clients a first-hand experience of what it is like to track the Sasquatch,” says Bill Miller, SCA founder and President and a full-time Sasquatch investigator. In addition to providing access to the area’s scenery and wildlife, this outing includes a chance to learn more about the Sasquatch, including information on local sightings, its history and the scientific research around the legendary creature. Guests examine evidence from previous sightings, including track casts and photographs, with an entertaining mix of information and exploration.

The Sasquatch Country Adventures season is weather-dependent, and generally runs from May to September, but is open all year around. Outings are typically two hours and start at $90 per person with a reduced rate for multiple seat bookings at the time of purchase. They are highly customizable, with group, private and multi-day outings available upon request.

Expert guides include well-known researchers, authors and photographers (Thomas Steenburg and Barry Blount) who have decades of experience in unraveling the mysteries of Sasquatch. SCA is the only business in the lower mainland of BC to offer guided outings to Sasquatch sighting locations with actual Sasquatch field researchers, all with the added convenience of a UTV that offers access to otherwise difficult-to-reach terrain.

Miller and his team have had their work profiled in documentaries including “Bigfoot’s Reflection”, “Bigfoot: The Definitive Guide”, and “Monster Quest”, as well as in the news media such as Global News, Shaw News, The Progress Newspaper, The Georgia Straight, and etc.

“The Harrison Hot Springs area is frequently referred to as the Sasquatch capital of the world, and for good reason,” Miller says. “Sightings in the area go back for countless generations, and the Sasquatch has become a defining element in our local culture and traditions.”

In fact, Harrison Hot Springs is home to many Sasquatch-related tourism opportunities, including nearby Sasquatch Provincial Park, as well as Ruby Creek, the site of an impressive Sasquatch sighting that has been documented in numerous books, documentaries and television productions. The area is also the location where a young Sasquatch was purportedly captured in 1884.

“Despite the work of countless investigators, the number of questions that remain about Sasquatch is daunting,” Miller says. “Like the other researchers I work with, I have my own theories about what the creature is, but my main interest is in finding conclusive evidence that will ultimately prove its existence to the world at large. I appreciate the chance to share this quest with visitors to the area.”
